

Mary Warner, MMSc, PA-C

Mary Warner joined the Board of Directors of the National Commission on Certification of Physician Assistants (NCCPA) in 2009, as the Physician Assistant Education Association nominee. She is the Immediate Past Chair of the NCCPA Board and co-chair of the Nominating Committee.

Warner is the founding Director of the Boston University PA Program. In that role, she is responsible for the development and oversight of all aspects of the PA Program including faculty and student services, curriculum development, planning, implementation and outcomes assessment.

Prior to joining BU, she served as the Associate Dean and Program Director for the Yale School of Medicine Physician Associate (PA) Program. She has also been Assistant Director for Didactic Curriculum at the Yale PA Program and Adjunct Clinical Instructor at Quinnipiac University PA Program.

Warner received her Master of Medical Science degree from Emory University and has practiced in emergency medicine, cardiac surgery and orthopaedic surgery. She served as a site visitor for ARC-PA, the accreditation body for PA programs.
