

James Gehring, MD

James Gehring joined the Board of Directors of the National Commission on Certification of Physician Assistants (NCCPA) in January 2018 as a Physician Director at Large.

Gehring, an assistant professor of medicine at The George Washington University (GWU), has extensive experience working with physician assistants. He currently has dual roles as the division director of hospital medicine and the medical director of the PA program, where he supervises PA students during internal medicine inpatient rotations and instructs first-year PA students. He also helped develop the PA hospitalist service at GWU Hospital and served as their primary supervising physician for seven years.

Gehring is a graduate of the University of South Dakota Sanford School of Medicine and completed his residency at the Drexel University College of Medicine in Philadelphia. He holds professional memberships with the Society of General Internal Medicine and is a Fellow of the American College of Physicians. He also serves GWU's Medical Records Committee.

Gehring is board certified by the American Board of Internal Medicine and licensed to practice medicine in the District of Columbia.
