

Policy for the PA-C Emeritus Designation

To honor those who have demonstrated longstanding commitment to lifelong learning, patient care and the certification process, NCCPA will confer the PA-C Emeritus designation on eligible PAs who apply for the PA-C Emeritus designation, after the expiration of their NCCPA certification.

Eligibility. Certified PAs who apply for the PA-C Emeritus designation will be so designated following the expiration of their PA-C certification provided they meet the following requirements:

- 1) Document their retirement from clinical practice to the satisfaction of NCCPA;
- 2) Have been certified at least 20 cumulative years during their PA career or document that they have retired from clinical practice due to permanent disability and have qualified for federal Social Security Disability Insurance benefits and/or disability retirement or long-term disability benefits (acceptable documentation is a statement, record or letter on official letterhead from one of the following: a treating physician/medical professional, a federal government agency which issues or provides disability benefits or a state vocational rehabilitation agency);
- 3) Have no reportable actions in their NCCPA disciplinary history and no NCCPA disciplinary matter in any stage of review;
- 4) Pay any fees associated with the PA-C Emeritus application process; and
- 5) Fulfill other administrative requirements as shall be determined from time to time by NCCPA.

Designation Maintenance. Like NCCPA certification, the PA-C Emeritus designation shall be maintained on two-year, calendar year cycles. Maintenance requires completion of a reapplication process, which will include attestation that the PA continues to meet the requirements established for initial eligibility. The PA-C Emeritus designation shall be suspended if the PA regains certification, and may be restored upon expiration of the regained certification if the PA establishes that he or she continues to meet the requirements established for initial eligibility.

Limitations on Use of the Designation. The PA-C Emeritus designation is not the equivalent of PA-C certification. Those designated as PA-C Emeritus are not considered certified by NCCPA and may not hold themselves out as such. Further, the PA-C Emeritus designation may not be used in any clinical setting or in the context of any clinically-related interaction, including clinical volunteer service. Doing so – or committing any other act that would trigger NCCPA disciplinary review for certified PAs -- will result in review in accordance with NCCPA's Policies and Procedures for PA Disciplinary Matters.
