

Temple Howell-Stampley, MD, MBA, FACP

Temple Howell-Stampley joined the Board of Directors of the National Commission on Certification of Physician Assistants (NCCPA) in January 2018, as the American Medical Association (AMA) nominee.

As Chair and Program Director of the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center PA Studies program in Dallas, Howell-Stampley advocates for the integration of PAs into clinical practice, maintains program accreditation standards and processes, develops new initiatives, plans curriculum development and enhancement, and ensures effective program operations and outcomes.

Previously, she served nine years as the Medical Director of the General Internal Medicine Clinic at UT Southwestern. There, she led the general internal medicine ambulatory practice in its efforts to become patient-centered, and focused the practice on providing high quality, evidence-based medical care.

Howell-Stampley's career spans more than 25 years and includes numerous honors. She is a member of the Physician Assistant Education Association and the Texas Academy of Physician Assistants. She has served on multiple boards including the Texas Chapter of the American College of Physicians and the Dallas County Medical Society.

Howell-Stampley is a graduate of the East Carolina University School of Medicine and holds an Master of Business Administration degree in Healthcare Organization Leadership from the University of Texas – Dallas.